Hello Graduates. My name is Dr. Solina Richter and I am the dean of the College of Nursing at the University of Saskatchewan.

Today, I bring congratulatory greetings to the spring 2022 nursing graduates from our Bachelor of Science in Nursing and Master of Nursing programs. As you move from nursing student to health care professional, you join the ranks of over 10,700 distinguished USask College of Nursing alumni.

Convocation is a time for you to pause, to look back on your hard work, and to celebrate. Nursing education is difficult - requiring perseverance, commitment, and passion to finish your studies.

Whether you completed your program in Saskatoon or from a distance, be assured, your education will allow you to thrive in the nursing profession, no matter what path you choose and no matter where you live.

The pandemic changed the way the world views healthcare, in particular, it shone a light on the crucial role Registered Nurses play. Don't let that light scare you; instead, let it inspire you.

Take with you the skills you learned in your program and be the nurse the world needs.

On behalf of the faculty and staff of the College of Nursing, congratulations to each and every one of you and your families that have supported you on this journey. Take care.
